The dating of the DK diaries

Notes: the names of this diary were made on the same day this document was written.

The CCBill diary

The oldest diary, the CCBill diary (abbreviated CCBD), can be dated based on the note on the first page saying “FIRST MAY” and a documentation of what my younger sister was doing which I used to write as the events were happening.

The documentation describes her as a baby. She was born in early 2017, meaning that the two pieces of data perfectly match.

Additional information in the diary also proves that it must’ve been written at some point in 2017. An example of this is a comic I wrote with a text above it marking the present year, which was 2017. Before that comic, another comic also marks the present year as 2017.

The year 2018 is only marked as the present year on a page that is the sixth page when the pages are counted backwards.

The Interunfall diary

This diary, abbreviated IFD, was named after the name “INTERUNFALL” written on the starting cover. In this diary there is a note at the end of one comic I made which says that the comic was finished on 29th March of 2018 exactly at 17:40. Based on the position of this comic in the diary, the start of the dairy can be dated to around the beginning of 2018.

As for the time period in which I abandoned the diary, there is a note noting my plans for the near future which puts the future date as the 19th June of 2018, and judging by the following few pages, I definitely abandoned the diary somewhere around that month.

The Zarabet diary

This is the second oldest diary, abbreviated ZD. It's named after the word "Zarabët" found on a fragmented piece of paper on the starting cover. The word came from a fictional language I was working on.

The cover was definitely put there around March of 2019 since the top part of it reads "TEN GOD'S COMMANDMENTS" and I put it there to honor the story found in the Book of Exodus which the religious education of my school taught my class.

Unlike the cover, the oldest piece of text found in the diary dates back to 5th October of 2018 at 21:13, and I know that because that's the date that the note gives for when I played Minecraft. I vividly remember writing it down in order to never forget when I made that thing in Minecraft for the first time.

After that note, there is another note on the next page which notes the date as 30th October of 2018.

Evidently I abandoned the diary before returning to it in early 2019. A few pages after that there's a note which notes the date as 28th May of 2019. Evidently I abandoned the diary somewhere in June of that year.

The Car diary

This diary, abbreviated CD, was named after the cover which is made of pictures of old cars. It starts with a few notes noting my plans for the near future, and the first date that is given is March 6th of 2019, so it must've been made just a bit before that.

The following few pages after those notes were evidently written in March of 2019, judging by the noting of some ideas that I knew I had only around then, and then after those pages there are another few notes noting my plans for the near future, and the date that is given in the first one is 1st April of 2019. Evidently I abandoned the diary somewhere around the middle of 2019.

The importance of these diaries

These diaries, as well as my old memories and files, are the sources of the diagram of my life since I began to live where I live now.